

Biography, Edmonton Aylers

Edmonton Aylers started out as a two-piece band in 2004. The uniting of Burt and Simon took place at a slightly peculiar location, a daycare centre in Stockholm, where Burt stashed his kids and Simon supposedly took care of them.

Having a mutual interest for lo-fi recording methods, The Sensational Alex Harvey Band, Prince, Wilco, collecting curious records and evidently beer-drinking, they led themselves to believe that they could also compose splendid music together. Having been in bands for most of their fairly adult lives, they just might have been right.

In 2006 the all-male-non-vocal-combo felt that they needed some talent in the band and contacted Burt's previous band-mate Cia. Later that year she was accepted as a fulltime, valid member of the band.

After a gig in September 2008 the band, again, would benefit from having some talent around and elected hired help, multi-instrumentalist Peter, to be a real member of the band.

And then they were four.

The quartet now composes a subtle mix of ambient lo-fi, folk, pop, sometimes instrumental, sometimes not - music with an anything goes-attitude in Burt's small, but with gadgets plentifully equipped, studio.

Enjoy!
